

Did You Know?

Over 30,000 of Palm Beach County's children under the age of 18 live in households whose family income is below the poverty level. Their families frequently cannot provide them with a pair of shoes that fit or clothing suitable for school play. A child's clothing stigmatize and mark him or her for ostracism or abuse. This can make attending school a painful experience and endanger the child's ability to obtain even a basic education. That is why the BallenIsles Charities Foundation feels that providing children with proper clothing deserves high priority. In 2017, your Charities Foundation made grants totaling $45,000 to the following four not-for-profit organization that provide shoes and clothing to school children:

Adopt-A-Family which provides school uniforms, along with school supplies and hygiene items to homeless school children.

Back to Basics which provides new school uniforms to underprivileged children.

National Council of Jewish Women which stocks clothing closets in 13 of the 24 Title 1 schools in palm Beach County.

The Jacob S. Zweig Foundation which provides shoes, backpacks
